The house was very frettily decorated for the occasion. The long dining table extended the entire length of the dining room, through the large double doors and the length of the adjoining room. The table was very prettily arranged Upon the snowy linen rested the dainty china, the elegant cut glass, and the fine silver. At intevals along the cen-ter of the table the color was relieved by small wreaths of smilax. Large plane lamps were so placed that the soft, delicately colored light added its beauty to the surroundings.

Upon the place arranged for each guest rested the souvenirs of the evening together with a card upon which was written some humorous selections. The souvenirs were toy pistols, duck calls and toy air guas, and they created no small amount of amusement when guests decended the stair and gath-

The merry season of opera with which the Wichita theatre goers were regaled this week closed last night. The attendance at each performance was good and the company deserved it. It was noticeable too, that a large number of new faces were seen in the Crawford Grand this week to see the Andrews Opera company. These included many of the people who as a rule and from religious convictions are generally adverse to attending any theatrical performance, but in opera they seemed to make an exception. The company gives a refined and clean performance, and there is no reason why any one could hestitate to enter the Crawford to see such a p formance. "Pinafore" was the bill the matinee yesterday, which was well attended and last night the romantic opera "Fra Diavolo" was produced. The company maintained its reputation for beautimul ensemble work in "Fra Diavolo" and the opera was well staged. Miss Atkinson, as Zertina, again was charming. Miss Grace Hale, as Lady Allcash, sang that part well and acted cleverly. Mr. Taylor, as Lorenzo, sang ters, as the English tourist, was a sucings well. Mr. George Andrews, with his wonderful rich baritone voice cap-tured the audience. His singing is artistic and his voice very musical, and as "Fra Diavolo" made a great hit. Ed Andrews and C. A. Parker, as the bandits, displayed excellent voices and really creaditable work as comedians. They brought down the house and were frequently encored. They kept the in a continuous roar when on the stage. Mr. Andrews has an exceptionally good voi e, and Mr. Parker is funny.
